About The Symposium

There have never been more changes – or opportunities – than accountants are seeing today. The Symposium's theme "Charting the Future of Accounting and Finance Professionals" provides an insight into some of the key global trends affecting the accounting and finance profession; the impact of new regulations on businesses, practitioners and academia; the skills and specialities in greatest demand; evolving career paths and emerging issues in the years to come. The main objective of the symposium is to provide young accounting and finance professionals with critical understanding of the changing financial regulatory landscape and emerging trends across the profession, helping them to capitalise on their career development opportunities.

The recent business failures have attracted increased scrutiny on companies' financial well-being by the investors and regulators, and have also resulted in a more stringent financial reporting environment. Young accounting and finance professionals are starting their careers at an exciting time.

The Symposium starts with a presentation to reflect the past years of financial regulatory reform and corporate failures which provide a basis for the transformative role of the finance functions. The changing external business environments have a direct impact on the role and career aspirations of accounting and finance professionals, and their organisations' recruitment, learning, development and retention strategies. This is to be complemented by a presentation on a recent survey of the employment trends across the accounting and finance profession. The employment trends will help to provide insights on the specialities and skills in demand, current recruitment and retention strategies of the organisations in response to the changes in the business environment and workforce demographic trends.

Young professionals are more mobile and their career will increasingly cross traditional borders, both inside and outside the finance function, and beyond national borders. This increased career mobility is facilitated by the growing global demand for the services of finance professionals. Two prominent CPA members who have overseas working experience will share their journey and experience in working abroad.

The roundtable discussion is an interactive session among the young professionals and the panelists. This is to facilitate the exchange of ideas of what are the critical business skills and attributes for the future environment and the role of MICPA as a professional body in delivering relevant professional qualification and continuing professional development programmes to ensure that critical skills are developed. Panelists will share their views on the diverse opportunities and various paths to success and whether the young accounting and finance professionals hold the right skills to be successful in this changing profession.
